RILINTHE FAMIL BY BEATRICE BURTON ,

Synopsis

Susan Broderick, young and pretty member of a poor but aristocratic family, is engaged to Wallace Steffen, promising young banker. Susan is exceptionally fond of Wallace but is not sure that she loves him. Although she doesn't realize it, Susan is more attracted by Allen Sholes, the new foomer, whom her snobbish relatives ignore. Uncle Worthy, his wife Edna and Aunt Lutie, still consider themselves the cream of surprise and indignation. He half rose in his chair and his angry glance went quickly from Aunt Edna's face to Lutie's. "Those are mine—to give away or not to give away, as I see fit."

Aunt Edna looked at him, her lips parted in an O of astonishment. "Wny, Morris, you don't have any wife Edna and Aunt Lutie, still consider themselves the cream of she switched off the light, all marked with a 'C' for Cullen."

A first-tious way of sweeping her long eyelashes up and down at them like Becky Sharp, a friendly way of saking them all about themselves and then sitting back to listen with wide-eyed interest when they answered her. But there was more to her than just a little bag of coquettish tricks. She was really entertaining with her hanjo and her husky voice. She talked well and she had a good laugh. Almost any man would think her an unusually pleasant companion even if she had no beauty at all.

Besides her own attractions, she had the attractions of the Cullen house for a background, Susan went on thinking. Aunt Nell's pantry was always filled with delicious things to cat, and there was a radio, a piano and a phonograph, for music if the young people wanted to dance. Aunt Nell and Uncle Arthur usually spent the evening upstairs in the sitting room, too, so that the girls and their friends had the whole lower floor to themselves. It would have been remarkable if Mr. Sholes had not had a good time there after the wintry airs of the Center Street house.

Many Probate Cases Pushed Forward at Meet of Attorneys

Efforts to close up a large number of estates that have been running in Probate Court were made Tuesday morning when attorneys met in conference with Judge James Barnes and reported on the estates under their care. In several cases citations were ordered against the executors to compel further steps toward closing the estates in their charge.

In some cases the attorneys themselves were at a loss to know how to close the estate. In one case the attorney reported:

"All that is left is a small piece of property. We have no cash. The holder of the mortgage against the property would not bid it in fearing he would have to pay the costs. We have been trying to get Santa Claus. the HOLC, to make a loan."

In another case the attorney was faced with a peculiar situation as is shown by his report: "This estate yielded enough to pay off the widow. We sent her the check for her part, but she did not cash it. The bank went broke and now the check is no good." One estate had been running for 15 years, another since 1921. In others attorneys reported failure to collect court costs and attorney's fees. Bank failures were held responsible for the failure to settle several estates. The court ordered reports in some cases, citations in others, and in still others attorneys were told to get the cases settled up as soon as possible. The meeting was for the purpose of clearing the probate docket as far as possible, and good progress to that end was made. Fifty to a hundred

Farmers in this county are being warned not to feed their stock the mouldy corn the drouth has produced in their fields. The corn is especially dangerous to horses. Two have already died on farms in the Waverly

The mouldy corn causes brain discase. The horses go wild and after much suffering, die. Much of the corn grown this season is immature and the ears are undeveloped. Instead of growing, the corn has moulded under the severe weather confi-a tions. It is bad, not only for horses, out for other farm animals as well It is not even good for chicken feed. Farmers should carefully select their corn for feed and see that no mouldy makes the best feed. Some farmers have not raised enough good corn to feed thru the winter and will no
